ABOUT US

Baltimore Center Stage is a professional, nonprofit institution committed to entertaining, engaging, and enriching audiences through bold, innovative, and thought-provoking classical and contemporary theater.

Named the State Theater of Maryland in 1978, Baltimore Center Stage has steadily grown as a leader in the national regional theater scene. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Kwame Kwei-Armah OBE and Managing Director Michael Ross, Baltimore Center Stage is committed to creating and presenting a diverse array of world premieres and exhilarating interpretations of established works.

Baltimore Center Stage believes in access for all—creating a welcoming environment for everyone who enters its doors and, at the same time, striving to meet audiences where they are. In addition to Mainstage and Off Center productions in the historic Mount Vernon neighborhood, Baltimore Center Stage ignites conversations among a global audience through digital initiatives, which explore how technology and the arts intersect. The theater also nurtures the next generation of artists and theatergoers through the Young Playwrights Festival, Student Matinee Series, and many other educational programs for students, families, and educators.

Dear Friends,

With this production of Lookingglass Alice I’m so pleased to welcome back a friend, Director Jeremy Cohen. In addition to having long and deep connections with most of our artistic leadership, you might remember Jeremy as the director of Colman Domingo’s hilarious and touching Wild with Happy (2013/14) or the American premiere of my own Let There Be Love (2009/10). Now, he brings us a new take on a classic story with the fantastical world of Alice.

Jeremy’s vision comes to life on our stage with the support of a most impressive team, including world-renowned choreographer Rennie Harris, considered the pioneer of Street Dance. The New York Times called Rennie “the most profound choreographer of his idiom.”

In collaboration with additional artists and a multi-talented cast, Jeremy and Rennie use movement, music, dance, and theater to tell a truly universal story of self-discovery.

JEREMY COHEN

When not freelancing around the country, Jeremy Cohen spends most of his time shepherding and supporting playwrights as the Producing Artistic Director of the Playwrights Center—a new play development hub and national artistic treasure based in Minneapolis.

He spoke to the cast, designers, and staff during the first rehearsal of Lookingglass Alice to share some thoughts on this production:

"We were struck by the question of what it means for this story—and for any of us—to be here, in Baltimore, in the fall of 2017. And, in particular, what does it mean for younger women of color to look around the world and ask: how do I develop community? How do I see roles for myself? And then there’s the central idea of this play, which is a young woman asserting, I want to be a queen. Or rather asking, Who is the queen that I want to be? How do I find my space? Who am I in the face of all of that, and in the world in general? These became really compelling to us as the central questions of our production.

As Patrice [Covington], who plays our Red Queen, put it to me: ‘Theater is an opportunity for empathy. If there is one thing our country is challenged with right now, I think it’s with this idea of empathy. How can we better make connections; improve our ability to find (or hear) our voices; or just, frankly, sit and listen and learn.’ There is something about Alice’s journey that resonates with these questions, something I think is so valuable here and now."

RENNIE HARRIS

Legendary choreographer Rennie Harris spoke to BCS about his process.

“I guess what I’m known for is bringing street dance to theater, but really merging theater and street dance together, marrying the two. I mean, a lot of the time when hip-hop is in theater it’s just hip-hop in the theater, versus how do you merge the two, and the aesthetic of the theater. And then also bring narrative and abstraction to hip-hop movement or street dance. I’m not a set person, I don’t have a lot of props when I’m with my company, so I like to figure out how to create the same illusion with bodies.”

MUSICAL NUMBERS

WHERE: Through the looking-glass and down the rabbit hole.

WHEN: Thirteen o’clock. And a bit after.
In 2015, Alice’s Adventures in Wonderland celebrated 150 years of publication. From academic Oxford to the revolutionary 2018 Pirelli calendar, Alice’s fantastical journeys down the rabbit hole and through the looking-glass have captivated readers, filmmakers, artists, and fashion designers, keeping the Alice stories an indefatigable part of our cultural imagination. Alice and the continuum of her reincarnations and reimaginings act as transformative framework, reflecting back our current cultural moment and anxieties.

Alice in Wonderland was born on a boating expedition when Charles Dodgson (Lewis Carroll) invented a story about Alice and her adventures in a fantastical world underground. After Alice Liddell, the story’s namesake, insisted that Dodgson write the tales down, he moved the setting from underground to Wonderland and spent the next decade crafting Alice’s Adventures in Wonderland (published 1865) and Through the Looking-Glass and What Alice Found There (published 1871), both embellished by famed illustrator John Tenniel.

At the time of publication, Alice both revolutionized children’s literature and reflected a restricted Victorian society at the precipice of change. With the Industrial Revolution gaining steam, London society was preoccupied with modernizations like a new subway system where, according to historians, “imagination could ‘run wild,’ and indulge a ‘passion for dreaming.’”
Technological changes brushed up against a society desperately clinging to old, stringent ways of life, codified in Victorian behavior. From this cultural tension emerges Alice—a child at the precipice of adolescence embracing Wonderland, a world full of imagination and free of Victorian constraints.

Using Carroll’s stories as a framework, the now-popular 1951 Walt Disney adaptation transforms the Tenniel line drawing of Alice into a modern animation. This full-color romp reflected 1950’s post-war anxieties. In this adaptation, Alice is a weaker, easily thwarted version of the intelligent, inquisitive Victorian child. She narrowly escapes death by the Queen of Hearts to discover that she was just dreaming through the adventure. The strong moralizing message to accept the status quo reflects a post-war society that sent women away from their wartime jobs and tried to force them back into homemaking. Though there are departures in setting, structure, and morals, Disney returns to an Alice living at the border of change in a society trying to maintain old practices despite a world charging forward.

Alice has continued to reverberate in nearly every medium from stained glass windows to graphic novels. Despite tone changes—the 2010 Tim Burton film adaptation of Alice in Wonderland is notoriously dark—setting adaptations, and other variances, Alice continues to act as a mirror for social anxieties.

How then does Alice transform again in turbulent 2017? We see a hint of this in the early release photos of the 2018 Pirelli Calendar. Alice for the first time is a Black woman surrounded by an entirely Black fantasy world. As photographer Tim Walker told the New York Times: “This is not about trends, this is about the zeitgeist today […] I think we are living in a fantastically exciting time, particularly when a story like that of Alice, that has held such resonance with so many people and been told in a certain way for so long, can now be told compellingly in another.”

The Alice you are about to see is part of the continued reverberations of a celebrated icon. Still caught in the tension between change and familiarity, she is now a young woman defiantly part of our current political and cultural moment.

Another cultural icon updated. Our prop shop made these shoes to help tell the story of Alice in another way.
During the second week of rehearsal, dramaturg Rebecca Adelsheim sat down with actresses Markita Prescott (below left), who plays Alice, and Patrice Covington (below right), who plays the Red Queen (and other roles), to unpack some of their thoughts on Lookingglass Alice. This conversation has been edited for length and clarity.
Do you remember what your first encounter was with the story of Alice in Wonderland?

Patrice: That movie with the real people came out a few years after I was born, so I remember watching that. I never got into the cartoon version, I don’t really remember connecting to it like I did with the rest of Saturday morning cartoons or Disney movies. But now that I’m in this story I’m wondering what the difference was in my psyche as a young lady that didn’t connect to it.

Markita: My first encounter with the story had to be as a kid seeing a compilation of different Disney films, it may have been like a special. I remember seeing those character images. But just like Patrice I didn’t grow up on this film the same way that I grew up on The Little Mermaid, Aladdin, and Cinderella. And those are films that I can recite all the lines.

I would say with this show, I’m starting to get to know these beloved characters with the imagery we have today.

What about the story is resonating with you today? How are you locating yourselves inside of your characters?

Markita: I would definitely say that it is Alice and this coming-of-age story. There is so much of me in Alice. I came up as an only child. In school being kind of awkward—I was a young actress, and at the time I was in a school where I wasn’t with other artists. And it was hard to find real friends. I feel like Alice’s journey is in that very same way, just trying to make friends, trying to find her footing, while at the same time trying to be a kid and be her kind of normal. There is a strong familiarity that I have with this Alice from beginning to end.

Patrice: Think about all of the Disney queens: they never really taught lessons, they are always evil. If you think about Snow White, Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty, The Little Mermaid; literally all of them are villains, women taking down other women. With our version it’s clear that the women are trying to help Alice become a queen. So that definitely is sticking with me.
When I think about Red Queen, she’s a teacher, she’s an inspire-er, she’s been through some stuff, that’s how she knows. I’ve been through a lot in my childhood and in my adult life that I now share with people to let them know that they can still be a queen. Look at the things that I’ve been blessed to do, look how I walk down the street and carry myself regardless of the things I’ve had to go through in life. Since earlier this year, I’ve developed a class where I travel the country teaching young children; and I have a special class for young women, little girls. I’ve started a scholarship foundation for young women. I’m always trying to show them, relate to them, that there is forward movement. It can motivate and inspire people. I definitely see that as something the Red Queen can relate to.

In our production, we are focusing on the thread of Alice becoming a queen. Can you talk about what attracts you to that narrative?

Markita: We’re talking about this young Black girl who is coming into her own as a young woman. The meaning of who we are today, just coming into our own as Black women today has turned into a strong part of our modern day culture and it is about really embracing who we are. In all of our glory.

Patrice: As far as this “queen” phenomenon right now: me and my girlfriends, we greet each other with “queen”. That’s just how we speak to each other now to remind each other that we are that. On this journey, Alice encounters so many things that could throw her off of her throne. And we’re here to remind her, “girlfriend pull up, you’re better than, you have to walk with your head all the way high. Don’t forget who you are, don’t forget what you came here to do.” Hopefully, that message of empowerment can really come through.

What do you hope audiences find in this modern retelling of these classic Victorian stories?

Patrice: My hope is that it becomes less about the fact that we are Black and it becomes an American story that happens to be told by some Black people. Something that people can relate to. Something that doesn’t matter what race, culture, creed, background, whatever—everyone can relate to it. Everyone can be changed and inspired by it. Touched by it.

Markita: I mean, I love that this is a story for us all. No matter the color of your skin, all little girls have imaginations—when it’s recess we all go to Wonderland. It just so happens that it’s a Black girl with a Black queen, oh my goodness. And that’s awesome, because I can only imagine, as a kid, coming to see this show, what it would mean to see this Black Alice. I would be so hyped, immediately, because representation is so important.

Patrice: I love that people of all shapes, sizes, backgrounds are part of this show. I just love that people are finally, about time, opening up.

What’s one thing you’re excited for in the rest of your time at Baltimore Center Stage?

Markita: I can’t wait for us to do our first run through of the show. This is the most challenging role I’ve ever had to play, in every sense of the word.

And as an actor, you want an audience, so I’m excited to see what the audience has to bring. They’re going to be part of the show—literally—so there’s that excitement.

Patrice: I’m looking forward to seeing how we all develop together. Doing a show eight times a week; you develop quickly, because you literally are creating every single night. You get a chance to try something new every single night. And we’ve only just now started our second week and we’ve only just scratched the surface of developing. So I’m very excited about figuring it out. What else is Red Queen? When I really know what the words mean and I am able to look in Alice’s eyes and really mean what I’m talking about, I look forward to that.

Ross served as program officer/project director at National Arts Stabilization, and worked with Baltimore Opera Company and Alley Theater, Houston. Ross has consulted in fundraising, board development, executive search, and strategic planning for theaters nationwide, including Kansas City Repertory Theatre, SITI Company, Wilma Theater, Trinity Repertory Company, Eugene O’Neill Theater Center, and Everyman Theatre. He has been a panelist for programs hosted by the National Endowment for the Arts, Theatre Communications Group, and New England Foundation for the Arts, among others, and was an adjunct professor in The Yale University School of Drama Theater Management Program. He has served on numerous Boards including Theatre Communications Group, The National Women’s Hall of Fame, and the Connecticut AIDS Residence Coalition. Ross currently serves on the Board of the Burry Fredrik Foundation.
Associate Artistic Director
HANA S. SHARIF

Hana S. Sharif is a director, playwright, and producer. She served as Associate Artistic Director, Director of New Play Development, and Artistic Producer at Hartford Stage; recently as Program Manager of the ArtsEmerson Ambassador Program; and as Developmental Producer/Tour Manager of Progress Theatre’s musical The Burnin’. Hana also served as co-founder and Artistic Director of Nasir Productions, which brings theater to underserved communities. Her directing credits include: Baltimore Center Stage: The Christians, Les Liaisons Dangereuses; Pride & Prejudice (DCArts: Best Director/Best New Play); Regional: The Whipping Man, Gem of the Ocean (six CCC nominations), Gee’s Bend (CCC Award Best Ensemble, two nominations), Next Stop Africa, Cassie, The Drum, and IFdentity. Hana has directed numerous developmental workshops, including Elyzabeth Gregory Wilder’s The Chat and Chew Supper Club, Janine Nabers’ A Swell in the Ground, and Marcus Gardley’s The House That Will Not Stand. Her plays include All the Women I Used to Be, The Rise and Fall of Day, and The Sprott Cycle Trilogy. Hana is the recipient of the 2009–10 Aetna New Voices Fellowship and Theatre Communications Group (TCG) New Generations Fellowship. She serves on the board of directors for the Greater Baltimore Cultural Alliance and the Sprott Foundation.

Associate Director, Director of Dramaturgy
GAVIN WITT

Gavin Witt came to Baltimore Center Stage in 2003, after nearly 15 years in Chicago as an actor, director, dramaturg, translator, and teacher—and co-founder of the classically based greasy joan & co theater. Among his translations and adaptations are a half-dozen Shakespeare plays; including a Jeff-nominated version of Pericles; Jeff-nominated translations of Beaumarchais’ The Barber of Seville and Ionesco’s Macbeth; and Baltimore Center Stage productions of The Voysey Inheritance and last season’s As You Like It. Baltimore Center Stage directing credits include Twelfth Night and a recent short film from a Kenneth Lin script commissioned by Baltimore Center Stage and the Goethe Institut-Washington as part of the international P3M5 project—as well as more than a dozen Young Playwrights Festival entries, many more play readings, and the 50th Anniversary Decade Plays. In addition to working as a dramaturg on scores of productions, readings, and workshops at Baltimore Center Stage, he has also helped develop new work around the country. A graduate of Yale and the University of Chicago, he is currently on the Humanities faculty at Peabody Conservatory, having previously taught at the University of Chicago, DePaul, and Towson; has served on the advisory boards of several theaters; and spent more than a decade as a regional vice president of LMDA, the national association of dramaturgs, before joining its board.

IMAGINE enjoying some Shakespeare where you study, or a bit of Beckett where you work. Or how about Cyrano swashbuckling nearly in your lap? For some lucky folks around Baltimore, there’s nothing imaginary about it. Thanks to generous funding, and a renewed commitment by Baltimore Center Stage to the core value of Access-for-All, this is precisely what our new Mobile Unit, now entering its third season, provides area audiences.

Each round of Mobile shares a common outline: start with a landmark theatrical classic; cut or compress to ensure it runs in less than 80 minutes, with time for discussion before and after; find a flexible and diverse company of actors who can tackle the material and bring it to vivid life; and design a few distinctive—and highly portable—scenic elements, and maybe a bit of live music. Then, pile the whole thing in a van and take it on the road: performing at nursing homes, senior centers, halfway houses, middle schools, prisons, and other underserved venues. Finally, come “home” for a sit-down at 700 North Calvert as part of the Third Space series.

From its very first incarnation as a pilot project in 2015, response to this new venture has been overwhelming. It began with a lively, compact adaptation of Cyrano de Bergerac, which cut the three-plus-hours of the original epic to a tidy 75 minutes—and the cast of dozens to a deft trio. This went out to play for audiences from seven to 87, and was universally lauded. Last season saw the program’s official debut, featuring Samuel Beckett’s iconic quartet of absurdist misfits in Endgame, accompanied by a jazz bassist. This ambitious effort sparkled in nearly a dozen engagements on the road, ranging from Health Care for the Homeless and Earl’s Place Transitional Housing to Sandtown Winchester Senior Center, before returning for a final sold-out showing at BCS.

This spring, the Mobile Unit will present Shakespeare’s Twelfth Night, staged by the program’s director Daniel Bryant in a new adaptation by Associate Director Gavin Witt. This lively, sprawling tale of mistaken identity, love gone awry, and the irrepressible forces of life and laughter will get the full Mobile treatment: trimmed to run uninterrupted in one act and imagined for a dauntless cast of five playing more than a dozen roles, the production will also feature live music generated by the company, an imaginatively flexible setting, and even puppets. As usual, all of this will pack into a van and head on the road.

But, if you are not one of the folks seeing the Mobile production on tour, Access-for-All still applies to you; you can get your tickets now to catch the Third Space sit-down of Twelfth Night in a captivating version you’re unlikely ever to see again. Call the Box Office or visit us online to purchase or find out more.

FOR OUR AUDIENCES

DINING
The Sherman Café & Bar is located on the first floor. Our restaurant food provider, Flavor at Baltimore Center Stage, will be serving dinner and small plates on the second floor. The Nancy K. Roche Bar in the Deering Lounge on the fourth floor will be open during Head performances. Our food and beverage service will begin two hours before each performance.

DRINKS
Drinks from our bars are welcome in the theater; lids are required. Please no food in the theater. No outside food or drinks.

PHONES & RECORDING
Please silence all phones and electronic devices before the show and after intermission. Audio and video recording are strictly forbidden. No flash photography during the show.

BATHROOMS
Restrooms are located on first, second, and fourth floors.

BOX OFFICE
The Marilyn Meyerhoff Box Office on the first floor can service all patron needs regarding purchasing tickets, will call, listening devices, braille and large print programs, and address any of your questions.

ON-STAGE SMOKING
We use tobacco-free herbal imitations for any on-stage smoking and do everything possible to minimize the impact and amount of smoke that drifts into the audience. Let our Box Office or front of house personnel know if you’re smoke sensitive.

CHILDREN
Children under six are not allowed in the theater.

ACCESSIBILITY

MOBILITY
Wheelchair-accessible seating is available for every performance.

BLIND/LOW VISION
The Audio Description/Touch Tour performances of Lookingglass Alice take place on Sun, Dec 17 at 2 and 7:30 pm. Touch tours present a pre-show opportunity to feel props and set pieces on stage. Large print and braille programs are available upon request.

DEAF/HEARING LOSS
A Closed Captioned performance of Lookingglass Alice takes place on Sun, Dec 17 at 7:30 pm. Assistive listening and Closed Captioning devices are available to be borrowed at no cost. An ASL Interpreted performance will take place Fri, Dec 29 at 8 pm.

PARKING
If you are parking in the Baltimore Sun Garage (diagonally across from the theater at Monument & Calvert) you can pay via credit card at the pay station in the garage lobby or at the in-lane pay station as you exit. We do not validate parking tickets.

LATE SEATING
Patrons arriving after curtain will be seated at the house manager’s discretion.
