ABOUT US

Baltimore Center Stage is a professional, nonprofit institution committed to entertaining, engaging, and enriching audiences through bold, innovative, and thought-provoking classical and contemporary theater.

Named the State Theater of Maryland in 1978, Baltimore Center Stage has steadily grown as a leader in the national regional theater scene. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Kwame Kwei-Armah OBE and Managing Director Michael Ross, Baltimore Center Stage is committed to creating and presenting a diverse array of world premieres and exhilarating interpretations of established works.

Baltimore Center Stage believes in access for all—creating a welcoming environment for everyone who enters its doors and, at the same time, striving to meet audiences where they are. In addition to Mainstage and Off Center productions in the historic Mount Vernon neighborhood, Baltimore Center Stage ignites conversations among a global audience through digital initiatives, which explore how technology and the arts intersect. The theater also nurtures the next generation of artists and theatergoers through the Young Playwrights Festival, Student Matinee Series, and many other educational programs for students, families, and educators.
We are delighted to present the hilarious and romantic Shakespeare in Love as the second play in our Season of Community.

In Shakespeare in Love, Will and Viola uncover the now ubiquitous Romeo and Juliet for the first time, together. This breathless discovery of a new story transports all of us to a time when exploration of something now familiar was surprising and full of wonder.

The story also celebrates the need for a community to come together to put on a play (learn more about the theater business, during Shakespeare’s time and now, on page 10). Our production of Shakespeare in Love, with a cast of 20—plus the adorable Chihuahua Meatball, who plays Spot—is one of the largest casts we’ve hosted on our stage. Producing with these vast demands is made easier when we have a community of theater-makers and theatergoers behind us.

We hope that that you too will be swept away by this charming story of love, discovery, the joy of making theater, and the English language.

Baltimore Center Stage
1593. Various locations around London, including The Rose Theatre on the South Bank of the Thames, the royal residence of Queen Elizabeth I, the estate of the de Lesseps family, and the taverns and brothels of Shoreditch.

London in 1593 was an increasingly vibrant and vital city, bursting with commerce and humming with new possibility—if not yet the international metropolis we know today.

By 1593, England was enjoying the 35th year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The looming threat of Spanish invasion had receded since the Armada’s defeat in 1588. Even further distant in memory were the violence and terror of the long wars of succession and religion that had marked and marred the first half-century of the 1500s. English wool was in demand across Europe, English ships plied the seas with increasing impunity, and English venture capitalists were already funding settlements on the eastern shores of the new American continent. Chief among these was the Virginia colony where Lord Wessex hopes to make his fortune (named in deference to Elizabeth’s status as an unmarried monarch, the Virgin Queen).

While commerce and trade thrived abroad, and peace (mostly) persisted at home, English arts and culture flourished. Music, architecture, and painting, all made strides; but it was in literature that all bounds were truly overleaped. Poetry was popularized in the work of Spenser, Sydney, and their ilk, but even more dramatic was the explosion of a brand new craze: the live, public theater. With the support of noble patrons, writers competed to craft ever more adventurous works for the stage, where thousands of average citizens paid as little as a penny to flock to each new opening.

It was this world that young Will from Stratford was beginning to crack open in 1593.
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

Playwright

For the most famous playwright in the western world, we know shockingly little about the man William Shakespeare. He was born in the rural English town of Stratford-upon-Avon in 1564. Solidly middle class (his father was a successful artisan and his mother’s family were prosperous landowners), he likely benefited from a classical education at a local schoolhouse also used by travelling troupes of players. At 18, Shakespeare married Anne Hathaway, already pregnant with their first daughter, Susanna; she was followed by twins in relatively short order. Not long after, Shakespeare seems to have left Stratford: though the documentary trail goes cold in 1585, he shows up in London, on his own, by 1592.

In London, Shakespeare worked as both an actor and a writer, neither one a reputable nor a secure profession at the time. His first narrative poems, Venus and Adonis and The Rape of Lucrece, were published in 1593 and 1594. Also in 1594 records of his first plays appear, and he is believed to have written many of his sonnets at this time.

This is also roughly the moment in which we discover him in Shakespeare in Love (see Time & Place, opposite): still a fledgling playwright finding his way. It’s also the moment when he seems to have fused his dramatic instincts and his poetic skills into one imaginative and creative leap that led to landmark work like Romeo and Juliet.

A prolific playwright equally adept in comedies, tragedies, histories, and the mixed-tone “romances,” Shakespeare produced some 37 plays, at a rate of two a year until around 1611. While a successfully produced dramatist whose works were applauded in their day, it was actually as a shareholder in his theater company that Shakespeare achieved the financial success that enabled him to retire back to Stratford, where he died in 1616. Global fame came later.
Shakespeare in Love hinges on 16th-century English theater restrictions that banned women from performing on stage. In fact, throughout history, women have had to fight to take their place on and behind the English and American stages. This timeline highlights only a few of the major figures whose participation marked seismic shifts in that theatrical landscape.

WOMEN IN THEATER: A TIMELINE

BY REBECCA ADELSHEIM
The Judy & Scott Phares Dramaturgy Fellow

1600 Moll Cut-Purse (Mary Frith) was a notorious member of London’s underworld. She gave the first recorded female performance on stage: she dressed in men’s clothing for comedic musical performances and was later the subject of Middleton and Dekker’s play The Roaring Girl.

1610 Queen Anne and aristocratic ladies performed silent roles in Court Masques, which combined music, dance, stylized language, and complex production elements.

1660 At the end of the English Civil War, women’s role in English theater flourished. Anne Marshall was the first professional actress on stage, performing as Desdemona in Othello.
1670 Aphra Behn, one of the early female playwrights, produced her first play, The Forc’d Marriage. Behn’s comedies, notably The Rover, are still produced today.

1830 Eliza Vestris, the first woman actor-manager in London, took over the Olympic Theater and encouraged the use of “period” costumes and box sets.

1836 Charlotte Cushman became one of the most celebrated actresses in America and England. She was most famous for playing male Shakespearean roles like Romeo and Hamlet.

WHERE ARE WE TODAY?

The fight for women on stage did not end with Charlotte Cushman. While performers have made notable strides, female and nonbinary playwrights make up only 26% of those produced in the United States. Some of the efforts underway to combat the gender imbalance include:

2014 – The Kilroys List is published every summer by a group of playwrights and producers who collect nominations for unproduced plays by female and nonbinary playwrights. The list aims to take action around gender parity and racial equity.

2015 – Women’s Voices Theater Festival was created as a response to the claim that there is little work by women in the pipeline; this year’s festival of women-driven work will run in January and February of 2018 in the greater Washington, D.C. area. Baltimore Center Stage’s Skeleton Crew (Jan 24–Mar 4, 2018) will be part of the festival!
“Let me explain the theater business. The natural condition is one of insurmountable obstacles on the road to imminent disaster.”
—Shakespeare in Love

*Note: Shakespeare in Love is set in a theater called The Rose; modern research has given us greater access to the practices at the Globe (pictured here), which bore a great similarity to the Rose.

PLAYWRIGHTS were required to present ideas to companies. If owners and sharers decided the play was worth commissioning, playwrights would receive a small one-time payment for writing the play; few received any subsequent profits and copyrights were dubious.

MANAGEMENT Phillip Henslow built the Rose in 1587 and acted as the manager and bookkeeper. Plays were produced in repertory: the same play was never performed more than five times each month with new plays introduced every three weeks.
SET/STAGE The theater architecture provided an all-purpose setting for every play. Features included: a trap door in the stage floor and a balcony playing space. There was little scenery, but hand-held props and small furniture pieces were brought on and off to suggest location.

LIGHTING Without electric lighting, plays were performed during daylight hours. Daylight facilitated communication with the audience (some of whom paid extra to sit onstage) through direct address and asides.

COSTUMES were elaborate and by far the most present production element. Performers often had to purchase their own costumes or wore castoffs from the noble patrons.

ACTORS Companies of actors like the Lord Admiral’s Men were local to specific theaters. Lead players were often shareholders (“sharers”) in the theater’s finances; their pay fluctuated with the profit and loss of each show. All women’s roles were played by men or young boys.

BACKSTAGE space, or “the tiring house,” was where actors changed costumes, rested between scenes, and stored props and manuscripts.

AUDIENCE The general public paid a penny to stand close to the stage as “groundlings.” Gentry paid two pence to sit in the galleries. The wealthy would pay six pence for seats onstage or in the balconies with a limited view of the stage but high visibility to the rest of the audience. Maximum capacity: 3,000 people.
MANAGEMENT Baltimore Center Stage is led by a Managing Director and Artistic Director and, as a non-profit, is governed by a Board of Trustees. Seasons are structured around six shows running for 40 or more performances over about a month.

PLAYWRIGHTS submit drafts of new plays to organizations; scripts then go through a lengthy development process before eventually making their way to a full production. Theaters pay for the rights to produce subsequent productions of those plays, with playwrights receiving protected royalties.

SET/STAGE The Head Theater is flexible, and can change drastically in both seating configuration and design with each production. The stage deck has multiple trap options that often incorporate automated set pieces. Professional scenic designs are custom-built in the on-site scene shop and paint room.
AUDIENCE Unlike the Elizabethans, modern audiences pay more to sit closer to the stage. Head Theater tickets range from $25–$75. The “cheap seats” are typically on the sides. Maximum capacity: 415 people.

LIGHTING There are over 200 lighting instruments in the Head Theater grid that the lighting designer uses to shape the look and tone of the work, establish different locations, and separate audiences and performers.

COSTUME design is critical to modern productions. Costume designers determine choices that are then built or assembled on-site.

ACTORS Baltimore Center Stage employs professional actors, both local and national, who are cast through auditions and paid a set amount weekly regardless of the show’s ticket sales.

BACKSTAGE Behind the scenes there is a network of dressing rooms, a green room (for actors to hang out in; there is always tea & coffee!), a wardrobe room for costume maintenance, stage management offices, and more.

Associate Director, Director of Dramaturgy
GAVIN WITT

Gavin Witt came to Baltimore Center Stage in 2003, after nearly 15 years in Chicago as an actor, director, dramaturg, translator, and teacher—and co-founder of the classically based greasy joan & co theater. Among his translations and adaptations are a half-dozen Shakespeare plays; including a Jeff-nominated version of Pericles; Jeff-nominated translations of Beaumarchais’ The Barber of Seville and Ionesco’s Macbeth; and Baltimore Center Stage productions of The Voysey Inheritance and last season’s As You Like It. Baltimore Center Stage directing credits include Twelfth Night and a recent short film from a Kenneth Lin script commissioned by Baltimore Center Stage and the Goethe Institut-Washington as part of the international P3M5 project—as well as more than a dozen Young Playwrights Festival entries, many more play readings, and the 50th Anniversary Decade Plays. In addition to working as a dramaturg on scores of productions, readings, and workshops at Baltimore Center Stage, he has also helped develop new work around the country. A graduate of Yale and the University of Chicago, he is currently on the Humanities faculty at Peabody Conservatory, having previously taught at the University of Chicago, DePaul, and Towson; has served on the advisory boards of several theaters; and spent more than a decade as a regional vice president of LMDA, the national association of dramaturgs, before joining its board.
The Center Stage Society represents individual donors who, through their annual contributions of $1,500 or more, provide special opportunities for our artists and audiences. Society members are actively involved through special events, theater-related travel, and behind-the-scenes conversations with theater artists.

If you or someone you know has had a STROKE!

AFTER STROKE STRENGTH TRAINING
A VA Research Study Designed to Help and Challenge Stroke Survivors in Multiple Ways

The Problem:
After a stroke people generally lose muscle mass and strength at an accelerated rate. This can cause problems with function and general health if left untreated.

Good News!
Our preliminary studies show that regular, progressive Strength Training improves muscle mass, strength, function and general health after stroke. These important benefits are realized with only 3 months of training. We have evidence to demonstrate that this form of therapy may be extremely relevant for preserving health and well-being after stroke.

For more information about this research study, please contact

The Third Space initiative was launched several seasons ago with experimental theater in unexpected places. Starting last season with the renovation of our historic building, The Third Space got a permanent, designated home. The Third Space is our most intimate space, dedicated to bold, new, progressive voices with ticket prices to match.

With the advent of this new, space, we have a chance to showcase works that might not typically reach our mainstages. We began last season with That Face, a darkly funny play from British playwright Polly Stenham about a dysfunctional family hurtling toward collapse. Now, The Third Space continues this fall with performances of the much-lauded White Rabbit Red Rabbit.

WHITE RABBIT RED RABBIT

BY NASSIM SOLEIMANPOUR

DEC 12–23, 2017

No rehearsals.

No set.

A different actor reads the script, for the first time, at each performance.

A play for the most curious and adventurous theatergoers, this performance transcends time and distance. At once profound and hilarious, White Rabbit Red Rabbit has been performed over 1,000 times worldwide and has been translated into more than 20 languages. It will run in The Third Space for just two weeks.

“The whole experience is altogether funny and serious and surprising and you—by which I mean we—are all in it together.”
—SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINER

“A dazzling, transcendent piece of alive-and-kicking avant-garde theater.”
